A HISTORY OF THE ULLMAN FAMILY OF L[illegible] COUNTY, OHIO

Compiled by Adolph Ullman, of Loudonville, O. and read at the Ullman Family reunion, the summer of 1934.

"In the year 1827, there lived in Meidesheim, Alsace, Germany, a certain John Ullman, later known as grandpap Ullman with his wife--nee Margarite Herzog.

He being a very ambitious man, resolved with he and his wife to seek his fortune in a better land, free from oppression, where each man was the equal of his neighbor.

Thus in the same year he migrated to America in a sail ship having made the trip in 40 days and landed in New York, April 13, 1827, with his family which consisted of wife and 5 children, namely:-George, John, Adam, Peter and Margarite.

We of today have little conception of the perils to be encountered on a journey of this character. Imagine ourselves with the responsibility of a family, we being possessed with only a few dollars, turning our faces toward a country of which we knew very little, if anything. But his determination and his anxiety for his family carried him through.

After sojourning in New York for awhile he started westward, stopping at Buffalo and Cleveland, and finally landed in Wooster, where he purchased 5 acres of land, five miles north on the present city of Massillon. Six months after, when their little home was ready, a state of comfort and happiness, GRANDMOTHER was stricken with fever and passed to the eternal beyond, about the year 1827.

Grandfather being left with the responsibility of a family took unto himself a helpmate in the person of Catherine Dannenberger, about 1830. Of this union were born 10 children, namely:- Mary, Catherine, Daniel, Michael, Caroline, Barbara, Eva, Lena, Elizabeth and Diana.

Grandfather besides being a tiller of the soil, was a good plasterer by trade, and had the distinction of building the first cellar wall in the city of Massillon.

He was of medium stature and possessed of a great physique, would weigh about 185 pounds. He was of rather even temperament, easily imposed upon, very frank and unreserved in expressing his opinion. Grandfather was quite a pedestrian, thought nothing of walking from Massillon to Loudonville, which he usually accomplished in a day. When he drove at all, it was after the ox-teams, many a journey was made in this manner, usually starting from Loudonville in the evening, arriving in Wooster in the morning.

He was very plain in the manner of living and preferred a plain healthful diet to one of dainties and extravagance. One of his peculiarities was a hatred for oysters in any shape or form, and if he ever gave any advice at all it was, "Boy's don't eat too many oysters, there is nothing in it. "I am now 50 years old and never ate any either".

Once upon a time, he in company with friends, one the late Nathan Haskell, and the other Thomas McMan, after a business transaction went to a small inn to partake of a lunch, which had been previously ordered, but when grandfather discovered to his horror, that the first course brought in was oysters, he politely remanded his gentlemanly friends transacted until the following morning, but through grandfather's entreaties, the clerk relented and placed his application on file on the book which completed the transaction shortly before Mr. Kellan arrived on the scene making a similar application, when the clerk politely informed him, to Mr. Kellan's sorrow, that the farm just this minute had been sold to one John Ullman at the consideration of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre.

On returning home he soon disposed of his little Vassilion farm, and soon they were making their overland trip toward their new possession in Holmes County, Washington township. There being no house or barn on the place, nothing but wilderness, they took their abode with their good friends and neighbors, Jacob Clouse. This house was but one story high and contained but one room. In these somewhat cramped quarters, the combined families of Jacob Clouse and grandfather Ullman, which numbered 16 lived until grandfather felled some trees, prepared the timber for logs to build his own house, which was in about 4 weeks. It did not take long to build the house after the material was prepared, as the house was all built in one day. There was not one nail used in building it, and it was all built of logs, the roof was made with clapboards and logs laid on to hold them down. You can imagine that this roof was not waterproof either, for as the occupants of this upper department lay in their bed in the peaceful watch of the night, they could look upward and the heavenly bodies were visible, and to them star gazing had become quite an art.

The door of the house was made of rough boards, and a wooden latch and a string to it which always hung on the outside. The interior, I can assure you, was not elaborately finished, there being the usual fire place, the row of pegs to hang hats, and over this the loft, which they would enter with a ladder. Of course it was no very spacious, there was only room for one bed in which 4 big boys slept, George, John, Peter and Adam. When the bed time came they retired one after the other, as there was barely room for 2 to stand up at one time. After they were comfortably settled, they commenced clearing for the first crop, which was 2 acres of wheat, this would mean a great deal of clearing of logs and brush, which could not be used, commercially burned, the ashes were saved and hauled to town and sold to the ash factory, the ashes being manufactured into baking soda. Three wagon loads would buy one girl a calico dress which cost 37 1/2 cents a yard.

Hogs were sold on foot, not by weight, and no hog brought more than $3 dollars. Poultry was plentiful, if you could sell eggs at all, it must be in trade and only 5 cents a dozen. They had no coffee except rye or barley coffee. Whiskey, the best kind, was made in Louis Woolittle's distillery. 15 or 20 loaves of bread was considered a small baking, which was baked in a good old fashioned bake oven, which grandfather made himself, good big and roomy, as he had not only the family to provide bread for but many other visitors who always were made welcome in grandfather's and grandmother's home.

During all the cleaning it was the order occasionally to indulge in what was commonly called a grubbing, frolic, and these too, were quite numerous. The neighbors would gather in and after the days labor the cabin was cleared of all the contents, such as beds, table and benches and then came the regular old fashioned hoe down on the rough boards of the cabin floor. This merriment was continued until the wee small hours, when the company was ready for a substantial breakfast, which consisted of buckwheat cakes and pumpkin butter.

At this time very little of the farm products could be disposed of for cash. Everything must be exchanged for its equivalent in trade.

ground---[illegible] fat[illegible] be lo[illegible] rose[illegible] after the [illegible], the old house for the most part was [illegible], the walls leaning [illegible] and crumbling [illegible], yet all save [illegible] Barney Wilson (great-father built, which stood as firm as [illegible] and beautiful that morning. Thus you can [illegible] idea of [illegible] chill of winter.

[illegible] time we might relate many more such instances in which grandfather figured.

We must not forget to relate at least one of the many little capers in which Peter and his twin brother, Lester Brown or Uncle Les, figured conspicuously. During the stirring days preceding the war of the rebellion, troops of cavalry could be seen almost every day drilling on the streets of Louisville. This was quite an attraction to these boys, two young patriotic youngsters, who regularly came in to witness and admire the evolutions of the cavalry. They very soon noticed that the horses were exhilarated from [illegible] given on the backs of the cavalrymen. Being left at home alone, those two decided to take part of a trip such as they had seen on the parade ground in front. They were quick in inventing daring needs and small deeds which [illegible] attached to their cabin. [illegible] of a patch. [illegible] for two, permit to [illegible] horses we did not intend to [illegible] the thought [illegible] that it would not be a bad thing [illegible] on the yearling calves, and to cover the [illegible] be of no [illegible] they bought [illegible] mounted the calves with their paint [illegible] men had. But here is where they reckoned without [illegible] improvise upon which they had relied upon [illegible] mounted, of course, the spurs jabbed the calves in the ribs and [illegible] the calves [illegible] and down on the hill and back again [illegible] at a breakneck speed down over the valley leaving the boys [illegible] but wiser cavalrymen sorting their saddles in the road. [illegible] juncture one of the girls appeared on the scene and promptly reported to grandfather who dealt out the usual liberal dose of strap oil.

I had written to the heads of the whole Wilman family for information and had intended to give a personal history not only of your children but of your children's children. This I found would be very lengthy and wearisome reading and consequently curtailed it as much as possible. But I have a complete record prepared which I have in my possession today and which any one of you [illegible].

The grim reaper has made many inroads into our family as evidenced by the little cemetery on the North-east part of the Ullman farm.

Many years ago when the Ullman cemetery was unknown at the death of Mrs. Christian Young, it became necessary to provide a burial plac there being no other near by. This was not an easy matter to decide, so grandfather suggested that each donate one half acre of their own land for that purpose, which proposition was readily agreed to by Mr. Young, and thus the Ullman Cemetery.

During the narration of this history for convenience we reffered much to grandfather, do not infer from this that we are unconscious of the noble part preformed by his faithful helpmate, Mother Ullman.

The younger generation of our family know nothing of her only through tradition. But if you will ask those who knew, they will tell you of her kind ways, her kind disposition and loving christian spirit which she manifested at all times.

The venerable couple, grandfather and grandmother Ullman, who departed this life many years ago, lived not for themselves but for th futurity of their children, and the many good traits in both their lives we should all try to follow, as they lived for their home, their family and their church.

May their reward be great".

-----U L L M A N R E U N I O N-----

Summer is here again, I do declare
With a nest of robins in her hair,
So forget your work for just one day,
And to the Ullman reunion hie away.
Remember the dinner and bring your share,
Even if we have plenty and some to spare,
You'll enjoy a good program so never fear,
And meet the relatives from far and near.
It's Wednesday, August 20, at Odell's Lake,
These meetings are wholesome and not a fake,
Don't forget the date we'll meet you there,
So make your plans and begin to prepare.
Get aboard the ship and be one of the crew,
The reunion's success depends on you.

Clara Metz writes the following: "This is the story of Ida Ullman Beck. After their marriage for 5 years they lived not far from Greer, O. Then they moved to their own farm in Drakes Valley, where she died. Ida Ullman Beck was considered a very brilliant rural teacher, such a pleasing personality, nice talker, etc. I attended her funeral at the little church at Koehler Ridge and the funeral sermon was just lovely. I hardly knew the minister, Rev. Truxall, but after the services at the grave I said to him, "I am no judge, but to my way of thinking that was the most beautiful funeral sermon I ever heard". His reply, "She preached it herself. She was an inspiration to me. I never talked to her without getting something". I thought it was such a beautiful tribute at her open grave that I never forgot it."

She was the third child born to John Ullman and his first wife, Margaret Herzog. Her father, John Ullmans' second wife, was Catherine Derrenberger, a sister to George Derrenberger, who had married the daughter of John Ullman and Margaret Herzog. This, of course, made no blood tie.

Clara Motz gives me the following information which I feel should be placed in this part of the history.

She states that John Ullmans' first wife, Margaret Herzog Ullman was buried in Canton and that they settled between Canton and Massillon, and the locality was called "Bake Oven".

FATHER AND MOTHER GREETING..
By Mrs. Kaley.

"Tis sixty years now
Since your marriage vow,
was taken, on a winter day
To live together
Thru storm and fair weather
According to God's will and way.
The blessings of life,
Its struggles and strife
Have been shared for many a year--
Your lives have been blessed
With friends of the best,
And children and grand children dear,
The evening is here
With its twilight cheer
To brighten the end of the way:
You have done your best
And the sun in the West
Shines clear, near the close of the day,
Thru the years that remain
May our Father sustain
And keep you in his loving care:
May you be in good health,
Which is better than wealth
And the eve be peaceful and fair."

--- HISTORY OF MICHAEL MOTZ AND FAMILY ---

Michael Motz, son of Philip and Barbara Young Motz was born November 6th, 1845, at Kaylor Ridge near Greer, Knox County, Ohio. His mother died at the time of his birth or shortly afterward, and as a baby he was taken to the home of his aunt and uncle, the Mr. and Mrs. George Young, who lived near by, where he was brought up as a brother to the late B. J. Young of Millersburg, and the Rev. George Young of Lenexa, Kansas. The B. J. Young being three years old when the baby cousin came into their home. A very strong attachment grew up between these two boys. In due time they married sisters, and one year from the spring of 1867 to 1868, they were partners in the bakery and grocery business in Millersburg. At this time Mr. Motz thought he saw an opening at New Lexington, Ohio, where his cousin, the Rev. George Young had been called to preach in the Lutheran church there. He continued in business in New Lexington from 1868 to 1887 when he removed to Loudonville, and until the time of his death, he conducted a grocery store which he chose to call The One-Horse Grocery. He died March 7, 1927.

Magdalena Ullmann Motz, the daughter of John and Catherine Derrenberger Ullman, was born January 18th, 1844, at the Ullman homestead one and one-half miles east of Loudonville, in Washington Township, Holmes Co. Ohio.

She was the seventh child born to this second marriage, and the thirteenth of her father's children.

She was married to Michael Motz, March 19, 1867, at the Lutheran parsonage in Loudonville. Died Sept. 11, 1935.

To this union were born six children:-

Charles Edward, born in Millersburg, January 10, 1868, and died in New Lexington, May 13, 1868.
Clara Catharine, born March 20, 1869.
James Arthur, born February 11, 1874, and died July 7, 1874.
Ella Louise, born August 12, 1875, and died June 18, 1880.
Albert William, born April 16, 1880.
Laura Josephine, born July 11, 1882.

Albert William Motz was married May 19, 1909, at Galion, Ohio, to Rachel Letitia Kelly, who was born at Mansfield, Ohio, April 23, 1869, the daughter of James William Kelly and Agnes Emmaline Van Horn Kelly, and to this union is born three daughters:-

Martha Jane, at Loudonville, July 23, 1913.
Ruth Lucile, at Loudonville, January 31, 1915.
Elinor Lile, at Loudonville, August 7, 1920.
At this date, September 16, 1934, these daughters reside with their parents at 133 Lane Avenue, Columbus, Ohio. Clara Catharine and Laura Josephine Motz live with their aged Mother in Loudonville, Ohio.

This is an exact copy that I received from Clara Motz, Monday morning, January 28th, 1935, and put into this history the same afternoon. I wish here to thank Clara for her prompt reply and for all the information that she so kindly sent me. I will follow this with parts of her letter received this morning which gives some very interesting family history and which I am sure you will enjoy.

On January 15th, 1935, I wrote Clara Metz and asked her to write me and I would appreciate any information she could give me for the Shoemaker-Ullman Family History I was compiling. To-day, January the 28th, I received a letter telling me many interesting things as well as giving me the history of her family for the book. I appreciate this very much as she took time to do this when her mother, Aunt Lanie is ill and has been for some time now. Her mother was 91 years of age the 16th, of January. I will now quote from Clara's letter, as follows:-

"Eva Derrenberger was here when your letter come. She said, her Grandmother (Grandfather's first wife) is buried in Canton, but she would try to find out for sure. Eva's Mother, Margaret Ullman Derrenberger, was the third child born to Grandpa Ullman. She was 5 years old when they came across. She remembered only three things--That it took them just 40 days and 40 nights to come over, and a burial at sea when prayers were said as the body was lowered into the water--and the twin babies, 3 years old, how they looked and acted when they landed, Peter and Adam. These twins were very cute and when they got off the boat some man said to them---"you better take care of those cute little boys or some body might steal them", so the mother said, "Ich nimm einer und du nehm einer". (Please correct my German.) I take one and you take one So they took their first steps on American soil holding to their hearts their precious twins, fearing some one might steal them."
"I remember hearing Uncle Adam tell more than once how about the only thing he remembered of their coming over was the awful spanking he and his brother got from the captain. It seems they had climbed upon a rope or banister or something and swung out in such a way that had they lost their holt they would have fallen into the water. The Captain was so mad that he grabbed the little boys and gave them both what was coming to them. Uncle Adam used to say, "I never forgot it".

Also Clara quoted Selma Young Uhl as saying Grandpa Ullman owned land near or in Massillon or Canton and when they drive through they always speak of it and say, you find out where his land laid."
